This Newspaper Needs a Little Help from its Friends, Readers

As is the case with many other printed publications, the Greenbelt News Review is losing money. We are not broke – yet. But our expenses have been exceeding our revenues by more than 10 percent for approximately three years. Our paper relies upon advertising to pay the bills, and since this economic recession began, ad revenues have dropped. Our loss of revenue also has been affected by the changing nature of technology. Realtors have been major advertisers, but as homebuyers search for properties online, those advertisers have followed suit.

Although many of our readers still prefer to hold a newspaper in hand, others are turning to online news sources. Even though our paper can be read online as a PDF, the News Review staff must consider how we should adjust to these changes so that we can achieve the goal of 100 years of continuous publication as a volunteer community newspaper.

The News Review Board of Directors has been concerned for several years about the paper's financial well-being. Revenues no longer cover the cost of publishing the paper each week. The size of each issue depends on advertising. More ads mean more pages. In past years, issues of 16 and even 20 pages were fairly common. They are now rare. Recently, the board took actions in four areas to stem the outflow of the paper's reserve funds, including a seven percent increase in the advertising rates effective June 1.

The board also voted to reduce by half its patronage dividends to members (staff). No one has ever volunteered for this paper, that we know of, to receive the token dividends we pay as a way of sharing the profits of our cooperative. However, these dividends have been paid consistently for years and staff members have relied on the use of these small rewards. Since the paper has been losing money and patronage dividends are a distribution of profits, we had to cut back.

The board's third action is to establish an ad hoc committee to explore ways to increase advertising revenues. The committee will consist of staff members and members of the community who are willing and able to help the committee achieve its goals.

For the fourth action, the News Review will undertake another of its infrequent voluntary subscription drives. It is our way of asking for financial support from those readers who believe in the importance of an independent, all-volunteer community newspaper. The News Review is delivered free to homes throughout Greenbelt and we shall continue to do so.

If you feel that having this paper delivered to you weekly is important enough for you to pay a subscription fee and if you would like to help assure the financial stability of the News Review, we ask you to sit down and write a check to pay for your voluntary subscription. Checks may be made payable to Greenbelt News Review and mailed to Voluntary Subscriptions, Greenbelt News Review, Suite 100, 15 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, MD, 20770. Voluntary subscriptions are not tax-deductible.

Four Cities Coalition Supports FBI Relocation to Greenbelt

by Thomas X. White

Representatives from Greenbelt and its three neighboring cities covered a 10-item agenda at its January 30 meeting. The Four Cities Coalition agreed to support the planned relocation of the FBI headquarters to a site being offered it at the Greenbelt Metro Station and approved a letter to Prince George's County opposing a planned reduction in firefighter coverage at the Branchville Firehouse. The officials also heard a presentation on plans to remove radioactive waste from an old landfill in the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center.

All members of the Greenbelt City Council and City Manager Michael McLaughlin attended the meeting held at the College Park City Hall. Coalition members include Greenbelt, College Park, Berwyn Heights and New Carrollton.

By tradition each member city hosts a quarterly meeting. The host city sets the agenda, to which other cities may add items for consideration. Greenbelt contributed five items, College Park four and the Town of Berwyn Heights one.

College Park Mayor Andrew Fellows, who presided over the meeting, was joined by his eight council colleagues and City Manager Joseph Nagro. Berwyn Heights was represented by Mayor Cheye Calvo and Councilmember Jodie Kulpa-Eddie. Mayor Andrew Hanko represented New Carrollton.

FBI Relocation

Greenbelt asked for support for relocation of the FBI Headquarters to the Greenbelt Station North Core site following the council's January 14 decision to endorse the relocation. Mayor Judith Davis introduced the topic and invited the attorney for Renard Development, Garth Beall, to bring other officials up to date on the developer's bid to bring the FBI complex to Greenbelt.

At a January 17 General Services Administration (GSA) briefing for developers interested in the FBI project, GSA advised that they were looking for development of a 2.1 million net square foot campus complex to replace the nearly 50-year-old Hoover Building in Washington D.C. The complex would allow consolidating about 20 other FBI facilities there.

The GSA prefers that the federal government own the site, with the possibility of the chosen developer obtaining a ground lease. Another feature of the proposal would permit the developer to assume ownership of the existing Hoover Building. Beall indicated that GSA's estimate for bringing the Hoover building up to speed was about $850 million.

Beall said that the timeline for the process requires proposals from interested developers to be submitted by March 4. Following review of submissions, GSA would invite further solicitations to a few chosen developers by late summer.

Possible Plan

Beall displayed a very preliminary plan Renard is developing for the March submission. Generally the plan would locate retail, office and multi-family housing adjacent to the Metro track and station. The road connecting the North and South

Murray Malveau Reflects On Racial Progress, Truth

by Jonathan Taylor

Ninety-four miles separate Murray Malveaux's Louisiana hometown of Lake Charles from his maternal grandmother's house in Opelousas. Today, after 35 years of marriage, three children, seven grandchildren, 28 years in Greenbelt and a life of "putting back" into the community, Malveaux can make the trip without stopping. However, one Christmas afternoon in 1959, his father did stop.

Setting aside concerns about Jim Crow, he stopped at a Dairy Queen to satisfy the hunger of Malveaux and his siblings. "Well, he comes back to the car, and he's angry. He slams the door, and he tells my mother, 'Let's go, Marjorie.' She says, 'What's wrong, Nolton?' And he says, 'They want me to go in the back to get food and I will not do that. I am a man. I have pride. I have dignity.' And I'll never forget – he looked at us kids – and he was angry – and he said, 'You all should not accept anything that says you're less than someone else.' Those words just resonated in me throughout my life."

And resonate they have.

Malveaux has been an executive board member, economic development chair and youth adviser for the Prince George's County chapter of the NAACP. He is former president of Leadership

Gibbs Talks on Woodson For Black History Month

by Jessica Suss

Historian C. R. Gibbs, an author of several books and noted historian of the African Diaspora, lectured about African American scholar Carter G. Woodson's years in the nation's capital on February 5 at the Greenbelt Library.

Gibbs says he chose to give the presentation on this era of Woodson's life because it hadn't been widely discussed. Gibbs called it an "unknown chapter of [Woodson's] life and achievements."

The presentation drew about 30 people, including young children with their parents. It featured a slideshow of pictures Gibbs said had inspired and made an impression on Woodson. These images included former slaves, racially charged cartoons, famous African Americans and photographs of Washington, D.C. from the early 20th century.

Everything young blacks have today, "somebody paid for not too long ago," Gibbs stressed. The atmosphere during the presentation resembled that of a preacher with his congregation. Gibbs said it is necessary to learn the lessons of the past in order to apply them to the problems of the day. This was something he said Woodson had accomplished during his lifetime.

Gibbs focused on what had led to Woodson being considered the "father of black history," including his many years of education and work in the D.C. public

Obituaries

John P. Gardes

Former long-time resident John Patrick (Pat) Gardes died peacefully on February 5, 2013, in Annapolis of Parkinson's disease after a long illness.

Mr. Gardes was born in Washington, D.C., on January 16, 1934, and spent the early part of his youth in Needham, Mass., until the family moved back to the D.C. area.

He graduated from St. John's College High School (1952) in the District of Columbia, afterward serving in the US Army, 3rd Cavalry, in Berlin.

When he returned from Germany, he met and married his wife, Marian Gail (Caffrey) Gardes. He graduated from George Washington University in 1961.

He began his career on the ground floor of the computer revolution, starting with IBM in 1963 in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. He then worked at the Association of American Railroads, ultimately retiring from the U.S. government.

Mr. Gardes and his family lived in Greenbelt for many years in Boxwood.

He had a quick wit, was delightful to talk to and had a fondness for the bread pudding at Commander's Palace in New Orleans. He was a proud father and grandfather who loved working on cars, gardening, watching This Old House, volunteering with the Coast Guard Auxiliary and sailing on the "Chesterpeake" Bay. He was known as a remarkable man as much for his compassion as his humanity.

He was also a proud member of American Legion Post 136 in Greenbelt.

Mr. Gardes was preceded in death by his mother, Loretta Genevieve (Fern) Gardes, and father, George Wiltz Washburn Gardes.

He is survived by his wife of 53 years, Gail; brother George and his sister-in-law Patricia; six children, Kevin (Laurie), Greg (Mary Ann), Brian (Cindy), Tim, Susan (Tommy Marcos) and Brendan (Kate); and 11 grandchildren.

A Memorial Mass will be celebrated on Monday, March 11, 2013, at 11 a.m. at Sacred Heart Church in Bowie.

In lieu of flowers the family requests donations to: Parkinson's Clinical Research Fund, Johns Hopkins University, 600 N Wolfe St., Phipps 300, Baltimore, MD 21287.

The management of Franklin Park at Greenbelt Station is holding a food drive this month for those in need. Greenbelt residents are asked to check cupboards and bring food to the leasing center at 6220 Springhill Drive. From February 11 to 20 donations will be made to D.C.-based Capitol Area Food Bank, which serves more than 700 partner agencies through Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

General Manager Lesley Luckardt says they hope contributors will include not just Franklin Park residents but that all Greenbelt residents will take this opportunity to give to those in need.

Especially sought are peanut butter, canned tuna, salmon and chicken, dried or canned beans and flour, brown rice, pasta, corn, 100 percent juices, sauces and more.

Franklin Park is also planning to host a household goods and clothing drive in March to benefit military veterans through the military Order of the Purple Heart.

Star Party Planned At City Observatory

On Saturday, February 16 the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt (ASG) will sponsor a star party at the City of Greenbelt Observatory at Northway Field. In addition to the observatory telescope, several members will set up their personal telescopes and binoculars for the enjoyment of all.

Observing will begin as soon as it is dark enough, probably around 7 p.m., although telescopes may be set up earlier. In addition to the moon, now approaching first quarter phase and the planet Jupiter with its four Galilean moons, now high in the sky and easily observed, several nice star clusters and nebulae can be seen. In particular the great nebula in Orion is a spectacular sight, as well as an important star-forming region.

The star party will be canceled without notice if it is hopelessly cloudy. Attendees are asked to park in the ball field lot, not up on the hill unless bringing a telescope. All are welcome. There is no admission charge.

Our Neighbors

Condolences to Hillside resident and News Review staffer Diane Oberg on the January 31, 2013, death of her mother, Ethel Oberg, in Wilmington, Del.

Our sympathy to Rev. Bobbi Troyer on the death of her father, Eugene Johnson of Riverdale, 91, on February 3, 2013.

We were saddened to hear of the death of longtime former Boxwood resident John P. ("Pat") Gardes, who died February 5, 2013, in Annapolis after a long illness.

Congratulations to Kenneth Silberman, who was appointed an assistant legal officer for the Maryland Wing of the Civil Air Patrol on November 27, 2012.

Former longtime Greenbelter Sally Robbins, now of Bristol, Tenn., sends greetings to her Greenbelt friends. Soccer Alliance Plans to Start Travel Teams

The Greenbelt Soccer Alliance will sponsor Greenbelt-based travel soccer teams at the U12 age group and above. These new soccer opportunities will operate through the Baltimore Beltway Soccer League (BBSL) and begin with the fall 2013 season.

Coaches will develop four teams for BBSL: U12 and U14, separately for girls and boys. Spaces for these teams will be filled first from existing GSA spring teams in these age groups. Tryouts will be held in late spring to fill any remaining spaces on the team with preference given to Greenbelt residents. The BBSL fall season runs from early September into November, typically with 10 to 12 games, half of them at a home field location Greenbelt is currently seeking.

All players on the travel teams will be assured of at least 50 percent playing time. Costs are still being calculated but will probably be around $125 per player per season. Coaches for the teams must be at least "E" licensed from the Maryland State Youth Soccer Association. That organization also provides the medical, dental and liability insurance that will cover players and coaches. City Council Supports ACE Grant Awards

by Kathleen Gallagher

This year’s city budget includes $7,000 for the Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) Grants to Educators program. Jon Gardner, chair of ACE, presented the committee’s report and recommendations for its 2013 grant cycle to the Greenbelt City at the January 28 meeting. He also described the success of the program and the growing enthusiasm for it in the schools. This year, Gardner said, ACE solicited proposals for grants of up to $500 from the six ACE “core” schools serving Greenbelt students, including Magnolia Elementary School and Turning Point Academy. The committee received 21 proposals from four schools, with none being received from Turning Point Academy or Greenbelt Middle School. Of the 21 proposals, ACE recommended 17 be funded for a total of $7,483, with the overage taken out of the ACE budget. The distribution of the 17 funded projects are: Greenbelt Elementary, 7; Eleanor Roosevelt, 5; Springhill Lake, 3; Magnolia, 2. Not recommended for funding were two proposals from Springhill Lake and one each from Eleanor Roosevelt and Greenbelt Elementary. Ultimately, council voted to support the recommended funding but most councilmembers agreed that ACE should address several issues in its future funding considerations. Mayor Judith Davis questioned funding for items that appeared to be ones the county should be supporting and did not appear to be sufficiently different from what is normally done to qualify as “enrichment” or “enhancement” to the curriculum. Councilmember Ed Putens agreed and was concerned that all requests from Center City were fully funded, while requests from other parts of town were not. Gardner explained why some proposals had not been fully funded, but council suggested that ACE might need to make additional efforts with some schools to encourage submittal of fully competitive proposals that comply with guidelines. Gardner said ACE would continue to work on that and noted that the grant-writing workshop Councilmember Emmett Jordan held at the beginning of the cycle was of great value toward that end. Council also urged ACE to continue to encourage proposals from Turning Point Academy. It was believed that no proposals were submitted by Greenbelt Middle School this year because of the efforts of settling in the new school building.

ACE Grants Fund Seventeen Greenbelt School Programs

by Jon Gardner

At its meeting Monday, January 28, council approved 17 Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) grants totaling $7,483 to four local schools. The ACE grants of up to $500 each are available to teachers and parent-teacher organizations from Greenbelt schools. The grants are given in response to proposals for projects or items that enhance or enrich school-based activities. They will be funded by the city and selection of the proposals for funding was made by council based on input from ACE. Greenbelt Elementary School won seven ACE grants. There will be a puppet show for all of the classes based on a Grimm’s fairy tale. The school will get new physical education equipment and a drying rack for the art room. Three grants will place technology in the classrooms with interactive clickers for the third grade, IXL online math software for the first grade and Study Island Science software for the fifth grade. A grant will be used to purchase a collection of books for literature circle discussion groups. Springhill Lake Elementary School will receive three grants. Two will be used to buy books and supplies to make Discovery Packs which students can take home, promoting at-home reading. A third grant is to provide materials for grade-appropriate science experiments in all the classrooms. Magnolia Elementary School will receive two grants. A grant will provide funding for a walking club; part of the Healthy Schools initiative. The school will also get a grant to support a green club, enabling a plastic bottle recycling program. Eleanor Roosevelt High School was also a big winner with five ACE grants. The school will start a Victory Garden, modeled on the gardens of World War II. The Victory Garden supports objectives of both Eleanor Roosevelt and Michelle Obama. The school’s drama class will attend a production of James and the Giant Peach in a local theater and the band will get transportation support for the County Assessment School Music Festival. The Literary Magazine will get an ACE grant and Special Education classes will get agenda books to help the students develop self-management and organizational skills. This is the fourth year Greenbelt has distributed ACE grants to local schools; in all there have been 67 proposals funded. Based on the success of the program and increasing number of high quality proposals that are received, ACE requested council increase the budget for the grant program from $7,000 to $9,000 for next year. Jon Gardner chairs ACE.

Explorations Features Epilepsy Presentation

Friday, February 22 at 1 p.m. in Room 114, the Community Center Senior Classroom Explorations Unlimited’s program topic will be epilepsy. Speaker Mary Wontrop will present an overview of epilepsy/seizure disorder to give attendees an understanding of the nature of seizures and epilepsy. Proper seizure first aid will be covered, as well as some resources available to those affected by epilepsy and services available from Abilities Network. Created in 2000, Abilities Network is a subsidiary of The Epilepsy Association of Maryland, which was incorporated in 1964 to provide community services to individuals with epilepsy. Abilities Network provides services to over 12,000 people statewide through its programs. The mission of Abilities Network is to “challenge the community to acknowledge the value and equality of people of all abilities.” Wontrop is Education Coordinator for Abilities Network/The Epilepsy Foundation of the Chesapeake Region (EFCR) and a staff liaison for its Professional Advisory Board, administering their meetings and special programs including the biannual symposium. Wontrop also works with epilepsy support groups and coordinates patient conferences. As education coordinator, she directs the epilepsy education programs, including foundation signature programs Take Charge, School Nurse and Law Enforcement and has worked on projects with EFCR such as the development of the teen epilepsy education program, Take Charge of the Facts. She received a bachelor of science degree from the University of Baltimore.

April Brings First Poetry Moment

Poetry Moment is an outdoor sign structure that displays poems throughout the year for passersby to read and enjoy. It was inspired by poetry projects in Takoma Park and Portland, Ore. Greenbelt’s first Poetry Moment comes to Roosevelt Center outside the New Deal Café in April, a project initiated here by Friends of the New Deal Café Arts and local writers. It will start with a contest for local poetry to be shown on the Poetry Moment sign structure.

Contest

Obtaining the poetry starts with a poetry contest open to all Greenbelt residents 18 years or older. Up to three original poems (with a maximum of 30 lines per poem) can be submitted for review. Graphics may be attached to the poem. For review purposes, each poem should be on its own page, with no author name. The author’s name, contact information and poem title(s) should be on a separate sheet. A panel of judges will choose the poems to be displayed. Entries will not be returned. The submission deadline is Monday, March 11. Poems should be sent to Marjorie Gray, 4-E Crescent Road, Greenbelt or emailed to marjgray3@gmail.com.

Prince George’s and the county chapter of Frontiers International. A human resources professional by trade, he works with his wife Carol in a company she runs called The Human Resources Company. The company consults with corporations and nonprofit organizations around preventive interventions for at-risk youth. With the aid of a basketball scholarship, Malveaux studied human resources at Purdue, graduating in 1973. He married Carol, and the couple lived in Chicago and then Springfield, Mass. until a relocation in 1985 brought his human resources position to Landover. A real estate agent who “really focused on Greenbelt” – with its convenient location, its rich history as a green community in Roosevelt’s New Deal and its potential for growth in minority representation – sold the couple on the city. But his father’s words also resonated in the Greenbelt of 1985, a city not yet seen as friendly toward its small minority population especially when it came to policing. The Greenbelt of 2013, he says, is much better. “It is really a diverse community now. We have an African American Mayor Pro-Tem Emmett Jordan today. There are concentrated efforts on activities and programs that bring people together from all backgrounds and cultures and I think it will continue to strive in that direction.” Clearly, Malveaux welcomes the many visible signs of racial progress in Greenbelt and in the country at large. However, he bristles at the suggestion that the racism his father experienced that December day has disappeared or that organizations like the NAACP have outlived their usefulness. “Racism is in the fabric of society, not only in Greenbelt, but throughout the United States. I think there will always be a need for an organization like the NAACP. And people who think that the NAACP is outdated or obsolete: either they are not knowledgeable about what’s really going on in the world or they have blinders on.” It is important to see, he says, the difference between the “physical” and the “psychological.” The physical – those measurable indicators of minority representation in neighborhoods, police forces and governance – has changed. However, the psychological – those interior racial attitudes which, for instance, call for reassurance that a presidential candidate’s mother is white and that his father, though black, is at least African and dead – has not changed completely. “Psychologically, there’s still a struggle in this country that sometimes people feel other minority groups are less than.” Malveaux also disagrees with those who argue that Black History Month, the 87-year-old brainchild of fellow NAACP member and Harvard-trained DC-based historian Carter G. Woodson (see related Black History Month story), is no longer needed. He sees value in the recognition of other cultures and, for young people especially, he sees value in the remembrance of the sacrifices that were made “to get us where we are today with the rights that we have.” Looking to the future, Malveaux again draws on his father for inspiration, but in a way that transcends race. “There’s a breakdown in the family structure around the divorces that are happening,” he says. “Unfortunately, young people don’t have a mother and a father at home. And to raise a young male, you’ve got to have a male around – somewhere – influencing that young male. My work with young people as a youth adviser has taught me that. Studies will indicate that.” It is an inconvenient truth nowadays that personal decisions about sex, children and relationships have significant consequences for society generally. Despite this, Malveaux sees those decisions as a critical part of the way forward – for all races. After hearing him reflect on the warmth of his upbringing and how it has made him the man he is today, it’s easy to see why. The blessings he received in the “black history” his father and mother gave him are the same blessings he hopes parents of all races will give their children, even as it becomes ever harder to make a living: “Find quality time to spend with your children,” he says. “Compliment them when it’s appropriate. Discipline them when it’s needed. Tell them that you love them.”

school system as well as his membership in the Washington chapter of the NAACP, which he reportedly felt had been too cautious. Gibbs discussed Woodson’s study of the black presence internationally and the ways in which pseudoscience and politics had attempted to limit black aspirations. Centuries of History “Wherever you go, there we are,” Gibbs said of the centuries’ worth of history he covered in his lecture. Gibbs, founder of the African History and Culture Lecture Series, has written numerous articles on African Americans in the U.S. armed forces for which he was honored by the Congressional Black Caucus Veterans Braintrust. In 2011 he was featured in an episode of the History Channel series, “How the States Got Their Shapes” and he was quoted in that year’s special supplement on the 150th anniversary of the Civil War published by The Washington Post. Future lectures in the African American History and Culture series at the Greenbelt Library include one on Tuesday, February 26 about the African presence around the world, past and present, and a final presentation on Tuesday, March 26 about the Harlem Renaissance. On February 1, 1984, the U.S. Postal Service issued the Carter G. Woodson stamp (pictured on page 1), the 7th stamp in the Black Heritage stamp series. Photo credit - © United States Postal Service. All rights reserved.

ANY LOVE NOTES FOR YOU?

Cores would be relocated further east and called Greenbelt Station Parkway.

The FBI complex would be east of the Parkway with a 100-foot setback to meet the Security Level 5 required by the FBI facility. The preliminary plan envisions the retail/commercial structure at heights of six to eight floors and the FBI building at 12 stories. He also indicated that the Indian Creek valley preservation area could be part of the security zone.

Beall offered to leave the copy of the preliminary plan but noted that it would be further refined for the March 4 submission. Generally those present showed wide support for the effort to secure the FBI location at Greenbelt Station. However some concerns were expressed, such as location of a 4,200-car Metro-structured parking facility. Beall said that Renard was considering putting the Metro parking lot south of the station. Other issues were the height and placement of the office buildings and preservation of wetlands and protection for the preservation area.

In spite of these issues Greenbelt's neighbor cities' officials voiced support for winning the FBI prize. Calvo suggested a Four Cities Coalition letter endorsing the FBI project in Greenbelt. His motion was approved.

College Park representatives encouraged a more focused public relations effort, such as video endorsements or a website and presentations Renard could use to show community support. Greenbelt Councilmember Rodney Roberts voiced his concerns regarding any development encroaching on wetlands. He reiterated his support for locating the FBI facilities on the South Core rather than the North Core.

Firefighter Staffing

Other Greenbelt agenda items were also supported, including a joint Four Cities letter urging the Prince George's County Fire Department to maintain paid firefighter staffing at the Branchville Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad. Greenbelt's representatives expressed their appreciation for the College Park decision to contribute support for the Greenbelt "bucket truck" used for raising banners and other street work. Calvo indicated that Berwyn Heights would also be interested in shared use of the bucket truck. Hanko said New Carrollton has its own bucket truck.

Davis advised the other cities that the governor's Fiscal Year 2014 budget partially restores highway user revenue to municipalities, advising them to track the issue as the budget is being considered by the Maryland General Assembly.

Greenbelt also asked support for amendments to the Preliminary Greenbelt Metro Area Sector plan. This was the subject of a District Council worksession scheduled for February 5. Greenbelt's January 29 letter to Prince George's County Council Chair Andrea Harrison was shared with the other cities. (On February 5, the District Council agreed to Greenbelt's request. See story on the Sector Plan in last week's issue.)

Other Items

College Park, which had placed the issue of state property assessments on the agenda, learned that Greenbelt and Berwyn Heights also had issues with reassessments of properties in their respective cities.

Pepco issues also were discussed, including rate increases and the tree-trimming program. It appears that other cities also are having difficulty moderating Pepco's tree trimming. Greenbelt had worked out a memorandum of understanding with Pepco officials and the other towns wanted more information about it.

However McLaughlin advised that agreement was from quite some time ago and related only to Pepco's trimming within city rights-of-way. As to Greenbelt's experience with the ambitious Pepco program of removing or trimming trees along their power line rights of way, McLaughlin said that Greenbelt had the same issues as the other cities and had assigned staff to monitor Pepco operations to assure that only trees marked were actually removed.

Help Find Missing Co-op Members

The Greenbelt Consumer Co-operative is searching for family members of the few remaining Co-op members who have not responded to notices for the past several years. At least some on the list are known to be deceased. The investment in the Co-op of each of these members will be turned over to the State of Maryland if no heir can be found to accept the investment.

The Co-op asks anyone with current information that might be helpful to contact the store by mail at 121 Centerway, Greenbelt, MD 20770 or by phone at 301-474-0522.

The missing Co-op members are: Doris A. Cottingham, Mary Lou Wolfe (Donnie), Catherine Dalton, William S. Souser, Ruth M. Mathes, Yvette Boldt (Elihu), Marian H. Slaugh and Patsy Betts.

Casual Dining at Old Line Bistro along with Wine, Beer

by Sandra A. Lange

The cavernous Circuit City store on Route #1 in Beltsville – closed for several years – has been reincarnated into a spacious wine shop and restaurant. The red façade is reminiscent of Circuit City but once you pass through the automatic double doors you are transported into Old Line Fine Wine Spirits and Bistro.

Aisle after aisle after aisle is filled with a variety of liquors and over 1,000 brands of wine and beer, domestic and foreign. Each is labeled with the country or area of origin along with type of spirit.

Travel to the very back of the store and you will discover the Bistro restaurant where pleasant servers dish up an eclectic variety of sandwiches, salads and hot entrees featuring succulent mussels and flavorful pastas. There are daily specials as well on both entrees and the spirits.

Don't pass up the desserts. An ultra-rich pot de crème or a chocolate lava cake with a swirl of raspberry sauce should satisfy the taste of any chocoholic.

Customers are treated in a friendly manner by this privately-owned and managed enterprise. One can sign up for free beer and wine tasting classes by accessing their website at www.oldlinewine.com. There is also a small marketplace where one can purchase chips, salsa and other related products. A selection of cheeses is still in the planning stage.

Old Line Fine Wine Spirits and Bistro is definitely a welcome addition to the local shopping market. Next-door neighbor Costco patrons can add another stop to their weekly routine.

Craft Beer Corner "Man's Best Friend"

By Rob Goss

The old saying is that dogs are a man's best friend. It's also been said that a beer is a man best friend. So it's only natural that many of today's craft breweries have adopted their dogs as mascots and inspiration for packaging and even their next batch of beer.

A perfect case in point is Baying Hound Aleworks a Rockville based Nano-brewery. A Nano-brewery is a brewing operation defined by a less than 4 US beer barrel (470 Liters) brewing system. The name of the brewery doesn't come from just one dog, but several. Owner and head hound Paul Rinehart loves to tell the story of the dogs that have inspired the brewery name Marmalade, a rescued bloodhound in 2007, Bernie (a bloodhound mix) and the real bass, and Wimsey the brewery mascot and resident blogger. In fact their Lord Wimsey Mild Place Ale is one of their flagship brews. It tied for first place in the July 2012 "Best Of" issue and is available in 22oz bottles at several local retailers.

A little further west in Frederick, MD is one of the state's largest breweries Flying Dog Brewery. Originally from Colorado, Flying Dog moved to Frederick when they purchased Frederick Brewing company in 2006. This is one of my favorite breweries because of the quality of their beers but also because they push the envelope in terms of styles.

Where does the name Flying Dog come from? Though they don't use specific dog names on their beers, the art of Ralph Steadman enforces the dog theme. Flying Dog beers are available throughout the states at your favorite retailer. Check out their website flyingdogales.com and Bayinghoundales.com for brewery tour times and other events.

75th Anniversary Film Premieres at Academy Theatre

by Thomas X. White

After over a year in the making, the Greenbelt Association of Visual Arts (GAVA) and Greenbelt Access Television (GATE) animation class production celebrating Greenbelt’s 75th anniversary was premiered at the Academy 8 Theaters in Beltway Plaza on Sunday, January 27.

The short film produced by GAVA/GATE Animation students used local Greenbelt settings and “super hero” characters to depict a struggle against Greenbelt values, only to learn that no single hero has the answer. Rather, the preservation of Greenbelt requires cooperation.

The main character artwork and animation was contributed by Nia Brown, John Commins, James Halstead, Madison Hudson, Tianna Nugent, Eileen O’Brien, John Townsend and Gabe York. The effort was led by Script/Project Producer George Kochell and supported by a host of other students, adults and GATE production assistants. The overall project coordinator was GAVA Director Barbara Simon.

Initial funding for the project was provided by a 2010 Jim Cassels Community Service Award from the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative and additional funding from the Greenbelt Community Foundation, through Prince George’s County Councilmember Ingrid Turner and individual donors Sean and Pamela O’Brien and Lestina Colby. The students and their families were proud to see the product of their efforts shown on the large screen venue provided by the Beltway Plaza Academy 8 Theaters.

The animation film will be scheduled for showings on the local Verizon and Comcast GATE access channels, and there will be another screening of the animation film at the Greenbelt Community Center in early June as part of the Recreation Department’s Artful Afternoon.

Penny Smith, set building workshop assistant; Tom Baker, set building workshop instructor; Barbara Simon, project coordinator; Chef Lou, voice cast; Eileen O’Brien, animator; Nia Brown, animator; Gabe York, animator; John Commins, animator; George Kochell, animation instructor; Tianna Nugent, animator; Dorrie Bates, advisory board chair, Greenbelt Community Foundation; and Prince George’s County Councilmember Ingrid Turner, District 4.

Reel and Meal Film To Be War Dance

This month’s Reel and Meal at the New Deal Café in Roosevelt Center will be Monday, February 18. The film to be shown is “War Dance,” about the lives of refugees in war-torn Uganda. Preceding the 7 p.m. program, a special vegan buffet is available for purchase at 6:30 p.m.

Before the film a brief video will be shown about African aid to victims of the 10-year “blood diamonds” war in Sierra Leone – who are to benefit from the clothing and shoe donations being sought by Greenbelters Abdul and Fatima Turay annually. Those attending are invited to bring wearable shoes and clothing. More information about this effort is available by emailing edfallon@gmail.com.

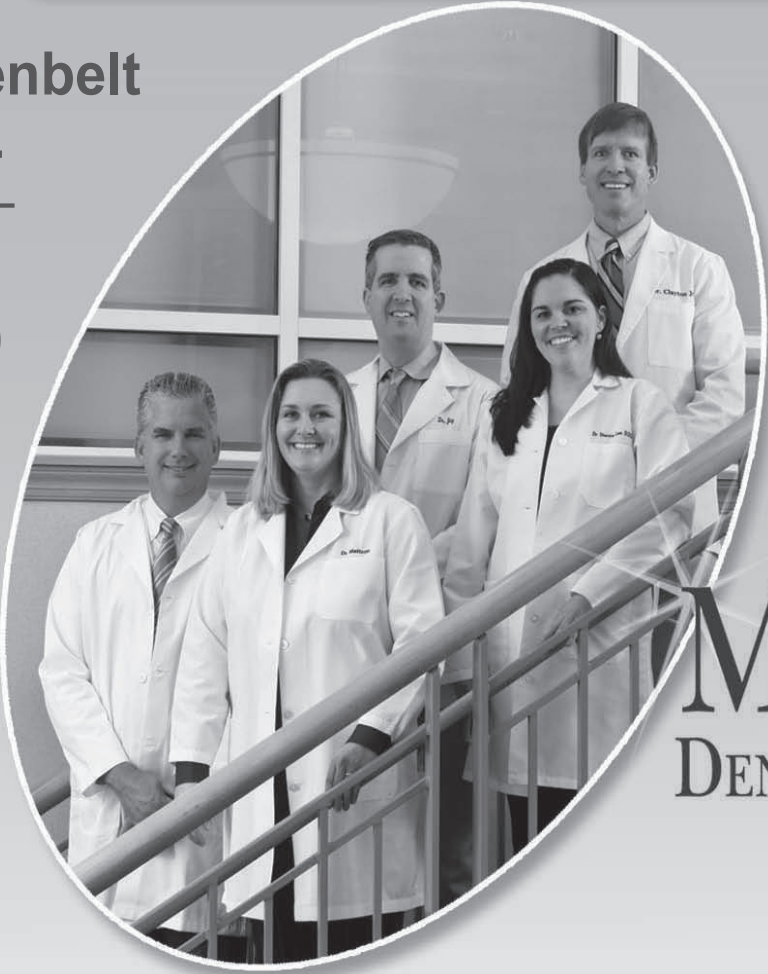

War Dance, written and directed by Sean and Andrea Fine, was nominated for the 2008 Academy Award for Best Documentary Feature and in 2010 received an Emmy for Best Documentary and Best Cinematography. War Dance depicts the lives of three teens, members of the Acholi ethnic group living in a remote camp under protection of a terrorist army. Their school won a regional music competition and is headed to Kampala to participate in the countrywide annual competition. As they prepare, the youngsters talk about the anguish and strife they face and their fears, hopes and dreams.

Greenway Center Needs Are Council Concern

by Jessica Suss

The Greenbelt City Council met with Greenway Center Management representatives on February 6 in a stakeholder worksession to discuss issues regarding Greenway Center, including new landscaping and pedestrian accessibility.

The meeting in the Greenbelt Community Center focused largely on new landscaping to be implemented in the spring, since the Planning Department has given the go-ahead.

The landscapers would like to put in more native and drought resistant plants as well as more color and trees. “The more pleasing the site is, the more people will want to go,” noted Councilmember Emmett Jordan.

Councilmembers also brought up the idea of moving or removing a few parking spaces to make room for more sizable trees.

“Instead of spending all of your time and money and energy, you could use student groups to implement rain gardens,” Councilmember Rodney Roberts said. In addition, Roberts noted that, in the past, the trees had been in expertly pruned. They had been cut back too far, in his opinion. He said he hoped this would be avoided in the future.

Councilmembers also discussed the issue of plants dying due to excessive heat from concrete and from insufficient watering.

Foot Routes

Council also discussed the need for multiple foot access routes within the parking areas to the perimeter sidewalks to aid pedestrians.

In terms of renovation and construction, the parking lot has been completely resurfaced since September 2010. In addition, Vice President of Property Management Lucy Fraser said the shingles on the back of the Center buildings as well as the decorative shingles at the front are being replaced. The bricks also are being cleaned and sealed as needed, and some plans for new roofing are underway at the 30-year-old center.

“We had a lot of capital projects this year,” Fraser said “and we’re ramping up to do even more.”

Mayor Judith Davis was happy to see the new bus shelter implemented.

“All of a sudden, it appeared,” Davis said. “Now we have to get access to it.”

Another issue, is a significant pothole near the entrance on Hanner Parkway. It has filled with water from a ruptured water line that needs to be handled by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

“People have been swerving in and out trying to avoid it,” Councilmember Edward Putens noted. “I go there a lot and I’ve been driving past [the pothole] for three weeks. The customers need to be taken care of.” “It could help create a positive attitude,” Councilmember Konrad Herling said.

Directional Signs

Councilmembers spent time talking about directional signage to draw attention to the smaller stores and about signage in general, including a dislike of pylons which, the mayor said, “can get tacky after a while.” Davis’ supports a monument outside the center as well as a directory and maps at several points throughout the shopping center.

Greenway Center is now home to 38 stores and vacancies are filling up, according to Fraser.

There will be two new eateries opening this year. IHOP is expected to open in May where Denny’s once was, and Royal Jade restaurant will open this fall in Jasper’s former space.

“Four years ago we were really concerned,” Davis said. “But I’ve seen [Greenway Center] improve.”

NAMI Support Group Meets

The National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) will hold a meeting of its New Carrollton Area Support Group at the Hanco Building at Beckett Field, 8511 Legation Road, New Carrollton, on Monday, February 18, from 10 a.m. to noon. This supportive work group prepares the mailing and provides other volunteer tasks while sharing their mental health experiences and each other’s challenges and solutions. For more information call Dominique Thomas at 301-385-1699 or email nami.dom@domthom.com.

Great Backyard Bird Count

On Saturday, February 16, the Patuxent National Wildlife Visitor Center will offer naturalist-led walks at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. as part of the 16th annual Backyard Bird Count. Join a naturalist-led walk to count bird species in a citizen science project that helps scientists all around the world develop the “big picture” about bird populations, movement and potential threats to their survival. Or come and do an independent bird count throughout the day and record the findings at the Visitor Center. The facility is on Powder Mill Road between the B-W Parkway and Rt. 197.
